AMC Networks Inc. shareholders (NASDAQ:AMCX) will have reason to smile today, with analysts making a substantial improvement to next year's forecast. Analysts have sharply increased their earnings numbers, with the view that AMC Networks will make more sales than they previously expected. AMC Networks has also found favor with investors, with the stock rising an incredible 10% to US$26.36 over the past week. We will be wondering to see if these new estimates convince the market to lift higher stock prices still. After this upgrade, 13 AMC Networks analysts are now forecasting revenue of US$3.1b in 2021. This to an 11% significant increase in sales compared to 12 months ago. Prior to the latest budget, analysts had forecast a yield of US$2.9b in 2021. This consensus is sure to be more optimistic, showing a strong increase in earnings forecasts. See our latest analysis for AMC Networks revenue-and-revenue-growthLooking on the bigger picture now, one of the ways we can make The forecast is to see how they measure against both past performance and industry growth estimates. It is clear from the latest estimate that AMC Networks' growth rate is expected to accelerate meaningfully, with revenue growth forecasts significantly faster than its historical growth of 3.1% per annum over the past five years. On the other hand, our data shows that other companies (with analyst coverage) in the same industry are forecast to grow their earnings at 4.8% per annum. It seems obvious that, despite the growth prospects brighter than recent past, analysts also expect AMC Networks to grow faster than the wider industry. The Bottom LineThe most important thing to take away from this increase is that analysts lift their earnings estimates for next year. They also forecast faster earnings growth from the wider market. Given that analysts appear to expect a significant increase in the sales pipeline, it could now be the right time to look at the AMC network. Want to know more? There is a growing sense of optimism, which is flattered by the availability of COVID vaccines and the potential they provide to return to normal on Major Roads across the country. Ultimately, the chances that the lockdown regime and social distancing are really coming to an end, and in the near term. There is a real chance that, by the end of 2021, Public John Q. will probably be back on his feet. Combine that with Wall Street's current turbulence, as the stock market trades at or near levels all their time, and we see the prospect of years of banners. The return to normal grassroots will be great - but we also have an increased market prospect overall. Writing from JPMorgan, US chief equity strategist Dubravko Lakos-Bujas wrote, Equity faced one of the best backgrounds in years. Risks associated with global trade tensions, political uncertainties, and pandemic, will disappear. At the same time, liquidity conditions remain very supportive, and there is a very profitable interest rate environment. That's the Goldilocks environment for risky assets. Lakos-Bujas is not shy from measuring his confidence. He predicted a 19% gain for the S&P 500, saying that the index would hit 4,000 by early 2021 and reach as high as 4,400 by the end of the year. Turning Lakos-Bujas' view into a concrete proposal, JPM's stock analyst cadre punched the table on three stocks that seemed very attractive. We run the trio through tipRanks database to see what other Wall Street analysts are saying. Sotera Health (SHC)Sotera Health occupies a unique niche in the healthcare industry, offering, through its subsidiaries, various security-oriented support businesses for healthcare providers. The service includes sterilization procedures, laboratory testing, and advisory services - and their interests are immediately clear. Sotera has more than 5,800 healthcare provider customers in more than 50 countries worldwide. Although not a new company - two of its branches have been in business since the 1930s and 40s - sotera was new in the stock market, having held its SMs only last November. The initial offer was thought to be successful, raising $1.2 billion on sales of 53.6 million shares. Earlier this month, Sotera announced that it was using many IPO capital to pay $1.1 billion in existing debt. This includes $341 million in first lien term loans, plus $770 million of aggregate principals on the issue of senior secured notes. The move allowed Sotera to increase its revolving credit facility to $347.5 million. The facility is currently not being perrawn. Among the bulls was JPM analyst Tycho Peterson who rated SHC overweight (i.e. Buy) along with a one-year price target of $35. This figure suggests 31% upside from the current level. (To watch Peterson's track record, click here) SHC is uniquely positioned to benefit from healthy end-market growth and facial price dynamics, Peterson said. Given the diversified operating platform, sticky multi-year contracts, efficient pricing strategies, essential barriers to entry and high regulatory oversight, we projected sales growth of ~9%, with higher consumption driving continuously [and] established FCF supporting continued concentrations, leaving us positive on both the near-term and long-term prospects. Wall Street's analyst corps is firmly behind Peterson on this one - in fact, 7 recent reviews are Unanimous Buys, making the analyst consensus buy strong. The SHC is currently traded for $26.75, and its average price target of $32.50 implies a reverse 21.5% by the end of 2021. (See share SHC on TipRanks) Myovant Sciences (MYOV)Let's stick with the healthcare industry, and take a look at Myovant Sciences. This clinical research biopharma company focuses on key issues of reproduction system diseases in men and women. In particular, Myovant is working to develop treatments for uterine fibroids, endometriosis, and prostate cancer. The Myovant pipeline now features Relugolix as a treatment for fibroids and endometriosis. The drug is in Phase 3 trials for the latter, and has the NDA submitted for containers. Also in the pipeline, and related to reproductive health, is MVT-602, a new drug designed to improve egg maturity and help in in vitro fertilization. In addition, Myovant has announced this month that Relugolix has been FDA approved - under the Orgovyx brand - as a treatment for advanced prostate cancer. This remedy is the first, and currently alone, Oral Gonadotropin-Releasing Hormones (GnRH) Antagonist Receptor for prostate prostate treatment. Analysts add, In women's health, we believe the amount of phase 3 data to date reduces the likelihood of relugolix approval in the US for uterine fibroids and endometriosis - less discerning commercial opportunities at current levels. Further, we see interesting commercial preparations for relugolix in the treatment of advanced prostate cancer as a verbal LHRH alternative with different CV risk profiles. These comments support Joseph's Overweight rating (i.e. Buy) on MYOV, and the $30 price target implies a 31% rise for the next 12 months. (To watch Joseph's track record, click here) Overall, the consensus rating of Buy Strong analysts on Myovant comes from 5 reviews, and a clear breakdown for cows: 4 to 1 in favor of Buy versus Hold. The share price of $22.80 a share and the average price target of $36.40 gives a strong upside potential ~59%. (See MYOV's stock analysis on TipRanks) Metropolitan Bank Holding (MCB)For third stock, we will change the lane from healthcare to finance, where Metropolitan Bank Holding operates - through its subsidiary, Metropolitan Commercial Bank - as a full-service bank for business, entrepreneurship, and personal customers in the mid-market segment. Bank services include business loan, cash management, deposits, electronic banking, personal inspections, and prepaid cards. In a tough year for most of us, MCB has managed to post strong revenue and income. The bank's highest lineup has risen from $33 million in Q1 to $36 million in Q3. Stronger EPS, at $1.27 per share, is up 30% year-on-year. The profit comes as the bank gives forward guidance of $153.9 million in total revenue for next year, which - if fulfilled - Reflecting a 22% gain over 2020.While MCB's financial performance has shown stable profits, stock appreciation did not follow suit. Stocks are only partially regited losses Last winter at the height of the corona crisis, and is now down 26% this year. Watching the New York banking scene from JPM, analyst Steven Alexopoulos expressed general difficulties in the commercial real estate loan sector - an important part of the MCB portfolio - due to the ongoing pandemic issue. In this environment, he sees the Metropolitan Bank as the right choice. We don't bear because of most of the views for New York properties. Having witnessed many cycles in NYC, the time to buy has been when the herd runs in the other direction. In the last cycle, MCB has become an outperformer on credit metrics in relation to its loan portfolio compared with our coverage group, according to Alexopoulos. Alexopoulos continues to explain another key strength in the MCB loan portfolio: In a low interest rate environment, MCB stands better than peers to withstand NIM headwinds with 59% of MCB loans are fixed rates and 67% of the remaining floating rate loans have floors to protect against lower short-term rates... For this purpose, Alexopoulos evaluated the MCB of overweight (i.e. Buy) along with a $50 price target. If the target is met, investors can reap a pocket profit of 43% over the next year. (To watch Alexopoulos' track record, click here) Some stocks fly under the radar, and the MCB is one of them. Alexopoulos' is the company's only recent analyst review, and it is decidedly positive. (Bloomberg) -- U.S.-listed stocks (Bloomberg) -- American-listed shares (US) Alibaba Group Holding fell most worrying about China's investigation into allegations of monopoly practices at the e-commerce company. Affiliate Ant Group Co., another pillar of the billionaire Internet Empire Jack Ma, was also summoned to a high-level meeting on financial regulation. The pressure on Ma is central to China's broader efforts to reconcile in an increasingly influential field of internet: Draft anti-monopoly rules released November give the government broad to stem entrepreneurs who until recently enjoyed the extraordinary freedom to grow their realms. The Alibaba investigation is a warning that wind has shifted, Bloomberg Intelligence said in a research note. The risk, analyst Vey-Sern Ling writes, is that business operations can face long-term headwinds as a result of those moves. Shares fell 13% in the biggest one-day record decline. The decline brought Alibaba to its lowest level since July, and stocks are now down 30% from the peak of October. About 141 million shares exchanged hands, the most for one session since its 2014 debut. Alibaba said in a statement it would cooperate with regulators in their investigation, and that its operations were still normal. Once praised as a driver of economic prosperity and a symbol of the country's technological slowdown, Alibaba and rivals such as Tencent Holdings Ltd. face growing pressure from regulators after gathering hundreds of millions of users and gaining influence over almost every aspect of daily life in China. It is clearly an increased coordinated effort to be independent in the Jack Ma empire, which symbolizes China's new entity that is 'too big-to-fail', said Dong Xiaimo, a researcher at the Zhongguancun Internet Financial Institute. Chinese authorities want to see smaller, less dominant and more compliant firms. Regulators including central banks and banking watchers separately will bring Ant affiliates into meetings aimed at driving back increasingly stringent financial regulations, which now pose a threat to the growth of the world's largest online financial services firm. Ant said in a statement on his official account WeChat it would review and comply with all requirements. Ma, co-founder of Alibaba and Ant, has all but vanished from public view since Ant's initial public offering got a hard last month. Until early December, the man closest identified by the rise of China Inc. meteorics had been advised by the government to live in the country, a person familiar with the matter had said. Ma is not on the verge of the personal fallout, those familiar with the situation have said. His very public rebuke instead warned Beijing had lost patience with the superpower of its tech moguls, increasingly seen as a threat to President Xi Jinping's political and financial stability the most prizes. Alibaba traveled 8% in Hong Kong to a five-month trough Thursday. The largest corporation in Asia after Tencent has brought losses among Chinese internet sector leaders since Ant's IPO got yanked, taking the overall toll to about $200 Tencent and internet services giant Meituan ended more than 2.6% lower, while SoftBank Group Corp., Alibaba's largest shareholder, sank 1.7% in Tokyo.While China is poised to launch a new anti-monopoly National leaders have said little about how hard they plan to clamp down or why they decided to act now. China's internet ecosystem -- long protected from competition by the likes of Google and Facebook -- is dominated by two companies, Alibaba and Tencent, through a labyrinthine investment network that includes most of the country's start-ups in the arena from AI to digital finance. Their patronage has also frozen a new generation of titans including food and the giants' journey of Meituan and Didi Chuxing -- Uber China. The House That Jack Ma Built Is China's Own Invention: Tim CulpanThe's anti-monopoly rules now threaten to disrupt the status quo with a range of potential outcomes, from benign scenarios fine to the disunity of industry leaders. Some analysts predict there is an upcoming crackdown, but that is targeted. They point to language in regulations that suggest a heavy focus on online trading, from forced exclusive arrangements with merchants known as Select One from Two to algorithm-based prices that favor new users. Specific regulations warn against selling at the bottom cost to light up rivals. But Beijing's various agencies seem to align their efforts -- a bad sign for the internet sector. There is nothing that the Communist Party of China does not control and anything that seems gyrating out of its orbit in any way will be withdrawn quickly, said Alex Capri, a Singapore-based research fellow at the Hinrich.Read more Foundation: Down $290 Billion, China Tech Investors Mull Nightmare ScenariosThe campaign against Alibaba and his colleagues got Market steering later suspended Ant's IPO -- the world's largest at $35 billion -- while anti-monopoly watchers threw the market into tailspin shortly after with his draft law. The People's Daily warned Thursday that fighting the alleged monopoly is now a priority. Anti-monopoly has become an urgent issue of concern for all things, he said in a comment coinciding with the announcement of the inquiry. Wild growth in the market should be curbed by the law, it added. Mouthpiece of the Communist Party said in a comment Friday that Chinese internet companies should regard the investigation into Alibaba as an opportunity to raise their awareness of fair competition and anti-monopoly practices. It is likely that Ant will be able to revive next year's massive stock listing looks increasingly thinner as China's overhaul rules governing the fintech industry, which in the past years have been as an alternative to traditional loans supported by the state. China is said to have separately set up a joint task force to oversee Ant, led by the Financial Stability and Development Committee, the financial system regulator, along with various departments central banks and other regulators. The Group is constantly in touch with Ant to collect data and other materials, review restructuring and formulate other regulations for the fintech industry. Things are going to get worse for Nikola (NKL). For stocks currently on fire in the first half of the year, the emergence of electric truck makers has been cruel. A series of events - alleged fraud committed by founder Trevor Milton, his subsequent resignation, a severe deal with General Motors - has sent investors to the exit. Now it looks like despite rubbish wanting nothing to do with Nikola.On Wednesday, the company announced that its plans to design and build BEV garbage trucks for The Republic Service's waste collection company have collapsed. The company has cited that the cost of building trucks would be higher than expected and would take too long, after both sides concluded that building a garbage truck using Tre Nikola as its base would not work. The market, obviously, didn't like the latest setbacks and shares dropped nearly 20% over the past two trading sessions. Deutsche Bank analyst Emmanuel Rosner puts frustration over the fact RSG is the only off-customer Nikola Tre announced so far, and is seen as providing some external confirmation of its economy. However, putting a positive spin on proceedings, analysts think the separation of the deal could work in Nikola's favor. Garbage trucks need big spending that isn't necessarily transferred to other core business ventures and TAM is also relatively small, the analyst said. That said, Nikola has other issues to contend with, analysts feel uncomfortable about the development of Nikola's BEV truck, which is expected at the end Although the first truck was produced and is now in the test phase, no customers have been announced yet, and Nikola's economy with it can be unprofitable for years. Overall, Rosner concluded, We remain by NKLA's side, and will closely some of the milestones are expected to be announced in 1H21, including potential hydrogen infrastructure partners. Thus, NKLA's analyst rate shares Holdings, although he may also have said Buy - because the $26 price target implies ~88% upside down from the current level.
